

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2017-2018

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the surveys returned are as follows:

97.6% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.5% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

98% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

88.2% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

95.5% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate technology skills at the level expected.

97.5% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

94.6% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

96% of employers rated the program above average.

96.5% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2016-2017

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the surveys returned are as follows:

97.7% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

97.2% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

95.1% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

89.3% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

94.5% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

95% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

92% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

96.2% of employers rated the program above average.

96.9% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98.8% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2015-2016

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 306 surveys returned are as follows:

97.9% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.8% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

96.5% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

88.9% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

93.8% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

94.4% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

91.7% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

95.5% of employers rated the program above average.

97.4% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

100% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2014-2015

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 309 surveys returned are as follows:

98.4% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.6% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

97.6% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

89% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

93.2 of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

93.9% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

92.6 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

94.6 % of employers rated the program above average.

97.7% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

99.7 of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2013-2014

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 221 surveys returned are as follows:

98.9% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.1% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

97.7% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

82.40% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

97 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

99 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

94.9 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

93.2 % of employers rated the program above average.

96.3% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

100% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2012-2013

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 318 surveys returned are as follows:

99.6% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.6% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

98.5% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

85.33% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

96 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

98.6 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

94.6 % of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

92.6 % of employers rated the program above average.

95.8% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

100% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2011-2012

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 179 surveys returned are as follows:

96% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

96% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

95% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

86% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

93% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

92% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

87% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

92% of employers rated the program above average.

95% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

100% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2010-2011

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 506 surveys returned are as follows:

97.6% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.6% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

95.5% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

85.9% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

93.8% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

94% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

90.7% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

90.5% of employers rated the program above average.

96.4% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

100% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2009-2010

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 500 surveys returned are as follows:

97.6% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.6% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

95.5% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

86% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

93.9% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

94% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

90.7% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

90.5% of employers rated the program above average.

96.5% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

99.8% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2008-2009

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

Results of the 500 surveys returned for the 2008-2009 school year are as follows:

98% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.2% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

98.6% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

91.4% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

95.2% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

96.6% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

94.2% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

92.6% of employers rated the program above average.

94.8% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98.6% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2007-2008

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

As of April 2008, after receiving 515 surveys, the following statistics apply:

99.5% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

99.5% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

96.9% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

89.4% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

95.6% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

94.2% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

91.9% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

89.2% of employers rated the program above average.

94.8% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98.5% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2006-2007

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

As of March 2007, after receiving 710 surveys, the following statistics apply:

96.9% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.2% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

96.8% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

86.4% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

85.3% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

91.9% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

87.7% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

88% of employers rated the program above average.

94.4% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98.8% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2005-2006

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

As of February 2006, after receiving 831 surveys, the following statistics apply:

97.8% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.4% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

97.3% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

85% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

92.3% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

94.8% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

91.4% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

88.4% of employers rated the program above average.

95.2% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

98.5% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2004-2005

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

As of January 10, 2005, after receiving 907 surveys, the following statistics apply:

97.1% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.1% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

97.3% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

85.5% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

80.6% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

91% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

87.4% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

88.5% of employers rated the program above average.

95.2% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

99.4% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.

GEORGIA YOUTH APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM CUSTOMER SATISFACTION SURVEY RESULTS

FY 2003-2004

The Technology/Career Education Division of the Georgia Department of Education conducted an employer satisfaction survey to determine the degree of satisfaction employers participating in the program have with the apprentices they employ and the program as a whole.

As of January 1, 2004, after receiving 919 surveys, the following statistics apply:

97.5% of employers agree that students perform at the level expected.

98.8% of employers agree that students in the program understand written instruction or materials at the level expected.

97.6% of employers agree that students in the program exhibit satisfactory communication (written/verbal) skills.

86.6% of employers agree that students in the program use math at the level expected.

78.9% of employers agree that students who participate in the program demonstrate computer skills at the level expected.

91.7% of employers agree that students who participate in the program exhibit satisfactory problem-solving skills.

87.6% of employers agree that students who participate in the program identify alternate solutions to problems.

90.1% of employers rated the program above average.

94.5% of employers agree that the program has been beneficial to their company.

99.5% of employers stated they would recommend the program to other companies.